

Betrayed (Book Four of the Silver Wood Coven Series): A Witch and Warlock Romance Novel

As Summer slowly recovers from being savagely attacked and left for dead, its not the assault that confounds her. As she, Templar Michael Charbon, and Wiccan Troy Atwater bond ever more tightly, their shared passion creates inexplicable changes in her. Though her two lovers vow to never again leave her unprotected, her unique power draws enemies to the Silver Wood Coven that none of them could have foreseen. Besieged from within and without, fractured relationships explode while damaged ones finally heal. As the winter solstice gathering draws closer, and the other covens converge, the stakes couldnt be higher. But when Summers memories begin to return, she glimpses her terrible purpose. Not only will she need to summon her power and her courage, she must ask the ultimate of her two men.

Interview with the Author

Q - If you could choose, would you want a Templar or a Wiccan?

A - Oh a Wiccan, any day of the week, and twice on Sunday. But in this series our young, beautiful and amnesiac witch doesnt have to choose!

Q - Theres a polyamorous theme to the coven series. Care to explain?

A - Thats the beauty of the Wiccan world: theyre open to love and passion in all its forms. These series have given me a lot of room to play. But let me tell you, I take my play very seriously.

Q - What order should I read the books?

A - The Silver Wood Coven series is numbered one through five, the Castle Coven series is numbered one through six, and the Magus Corps series is numbered one through seven. Although the Magus Corps series was the first one I created in the paranormal world of witches and warlocks, you can read the Silver Wood Coven series first with no problem at all!
