

Beyond the Tears: Soul searching journey into the realms of Spiritual Meditation, as Josie's tears take her to the threshold of Spiritual Enlightenment.

In this short story ( approximately 20 pages) based on a true experience, we share an uplifting spiritual religious encounter, as Josie, a young frustrated women relaxes into involuntary meditation and faces her true reality, Her consciousness. Embarking on a vivid mental journey going Beyond the Tears Josie now twenty five and still a virgin accesses her life in relation to her deceased father, her separated mother and her frustrated boyfriend, Dave. Her egoic mental activity of her mixed feelings, her wanting, her need to be loved and her frigidity became overwhelming, and she wanted to die. Feeling lonely and unhappy she indulges herself in a well of emotional tears and self-pity, with the help of her music and the dim moving light of a candle she retreats into the realms of her subconscious and embarks on a probable imaginary journey into a strange but realistic world of emotional bondage. As the tears flush out her emotive past, she has to face and accept the traumas of this exposure; she challenges this darker side of herself and identifies her neurosis. Needing to rest after a long and strenuous mental battle with her imaginary hysteria, she creates a heavenly mental garden through the medium of her Fathers bright and colourful painting. Sensing this garden all around her she absorbs the light and colour into her conscience and so finds inner peace and tranquillity in what she realises is her own centre, revealing her true self within her own consciousness. It is there that she meets her father and absorbs the spiritual uplifting message he appears to convey to her. Realising that death is only a physical process she becomes aware that her reality is her true consciousness, and her own personnel God. Approximately 5440 words. In the next story Beyond Acceptance we follow Josie where again we share her experiences as she comes to terms with the spiritual religious awakening of her consciousness.
